Philanthropy: Voluntary Action for the Public Good ...
My favorite definition of philanthropy as a social institution is simple: "voluntary action for the public good.". That distinguishes it from government, which shares philanthropy's intention to do good but is inherently coercive rather than voluntary.

Voluntary action does public good - Carolina Journal ...
This book challenges scholarship which presents charity and voluntary activity during World War I as marking a downturn from the high point of the late Victorian period. Charitable donations rose to an all-time peak, and the scope and nature of charitable work shifted decisively. Far more working class activists, especially women, became involved, although there were significant differences ...

Those reflexes, however, obscure truth. Spontaneous problem-solving through private giving is a profoundly American invention, and crucial to keeping our culture and economy strong. Brooks, who is better informed than the anti-philanthropy crowd, calls voluntary action "the central feature of American life." Yet the media "barely cover" it.

The Assault on Generosity and Voluntary Action
When he was selected in 1977 as head of the Exxon Education Foundation, Mr. Payton began a preoccupation with "voluntary action for the public good" (as he defined philanthropy) that would last the rest of his lifetime.

2 Voluntary Action for the Public Good (pp. 27-61) ... In previous chapters, we have made the point that philanthropy is "moral action" and that the moral dimension of philanthropy is the most important. The connection to morality, we argued in chapter 2, is the defining feature of philanthropy and the nonprofit sector, the essential ...

Understanding Philanthropy: Its Meaning and Mission on JSTOR
Philanthropy is based on voluntary action for the common good. It is a tradition of giving and sharing that is primary to the quality of life. To assure that philanthropy merits the respect and trust of the general public, and that donors and prospective donors can have full confidence in the not-for-profit organization and causes they are asked to support, we declare that all donors have these rights:
